

Kawasaki G-4 100

My
camper
could only
go
so far.

I like to fish those
really great,
out of the way
streams...

But my camper could only go so far. That's why I wanted a trail bike to take me the rest of the way. So I got a Kawasaki G-4 100. The standard equipment on this bike sold me. It comes dirt ready with knobby tires and a dual range transmission. Plus a very handy luggage rack. This bike has everything it needs to go anywhere on the road or off, but it's really at home in the woods. Those tires said it, and the rugged engine and gear system proved it. If the trail gets rough, I just switch the transmission to low range and keep going. I can inch through the tightest spots, or move right up a 40° slope without stalling. All together, this bike has ten gears that get me over, around or through just about anything. I guess you could call it basic transportation in the woods. Every camper should have one.

This rugged gearbox and two-way change-over system gives you a total of ten gear ratios to choose from. When the going gets rough, just stop and switch to the low range. Then you can snail your way through the tightest spots or up a 40° slope without stalling.
